A NOTE FROM THE PASTOR

This weekend we begin the season of Advent, our liturgical time of preparation and growing in awareness and focus for the coming feast of Christmas. Our liturgical theme this year, to help us in our preparation and focus, is “An Advent Home.” Once again, we will join our voices in song to help us celebrate this theme and to take to heart the lessons that it teaches. I think it is a great reminder for each of us and an invitation to further spiritual growth.

“An Advent Home” also suggests that this might be a good time to reach out to friends and families and even former parishioners with whom you are acquainted and invite them to come home to St. Gerard. This is a visible and concrete expression of what it means when we proclaim, “all are welcome.” This expression is not just a banner that we display at the front entrance of the church. It is rather descriptive of something that is in our hearts and enables the spirit of who we are and what we believe. It is also a message that more and more people need to hear and experience. To be welcomed and to be celebrated for who you are, at this moment in time, not as you might one day be, is the core of the message of Jesus. It is what gospel means in the entirety of the Word, not when you pick and choose.

While I was home for Thanksgiving, I discovered, much to my amazement, that my mother has become a huge college basketball fan. She has always been a person who follows baseball, in her case the Cincinnati Reds, and because I love hockey, in particular the Detroit Red Wings (an original six team), she keeps up with them so that she can mention them in conversation with me. However, to the best of my knowledge, she had never demonstrated any interest in college basketball but now she is a huge Michigan State basketball fan. The game was on when I was home and she was completely focused on what was going on and well informed. I think this new-found interest is because she is more interested in her great-grandchildren than in basketball, when all is said and done. One of her great-grandchildren, and my grandnephew, plays for MSU. He is #23 and I must say Xavier is actually quite good. Next time you find yourself watching television, and college basketball is featured, look for him. He is hard to miss.

Not only did we watch the game, we also talked a little bit about what is required of a player who plays for a major university. It is quite the commitment and nothing is left to chance. The coaches have a very clear idea of what they expect from you and what role you are required to play. Every single decision is made in support of that focus. This discipline and focus is not just during the season that the sport is in session but is a year-long focus. There is really no such thing as time off or a vacation. All of this and also the academic requirements must be fulfilled because they are “student athletes.” It is not for the faint of heart and although the rewards are potentially quite significant, there is quite a bit of discipline and sacrifice that is required. Knowing all of this has helped me to appreciate what is required in order to make the commitment that is necessary.

Well, that is all for this week. When I started this reflection I had no idea I was going to end up talking about college basketball; I thought it was going to be an introduction to the season of Advent. I will end this reflection where I started it, not on the basketball court but rather with our Advent theme, “An Advent Home.” Please take it to heart. Let the spirit of the season invite you into a deeper awareness of God’s grace at work in your life. That is my Advent prayer for each of you.

Fr Tom Santa, C.Ss.R.
